So many years have elapsed since the last reprint that a new edition will be welcomed. Since its first publication in 1836, this book has been recognised as a standard and authoritative account of the Indian Tribes, written and illustrated by men who had long personal experience and acquaintance with the subject. The historical narratives and the biographies necessitated the expense of vast labour and research, and could have been compiled only by those who had opportunities of meeting the Indians and estimating their character. The Editors have added to and corrected the text in the light of recent research and notes have been given from later sources of information. The 123 portraits in colour are taken from authentic drawings in the Indian Department, Washington. In this edition the plates are accurately reproduced from the original edition and include three extra portraits which were discovered later. The portraits of McKenney and Hall are reproduced in photogravure, and the coloured maps show "The Localities of the Indian Tribes in 1833," and "The Indian Reservation in 1906."

- 38 Mackenzie (Sir Alexander) MACKENZIE of CANADA : the Life and Adventures of Alexander Mackenzie, by M. S. Wade, illusts. and map, 1927 (pub. 15s) 5s
Notwithstanding the romantic story of his life, and the tremendous importance of his achievements as a discoverer and explorer, it is remarkable that no book has hitherto been published giving an account of the life and work of Sir Alexander Mackenzie. That omission this volume is intended to supply.

ANTHROPOLOGY.

- 41 Churchward (A.) ORIGIN and EVOLUTION of the HUMAN RACE, with front., 88 plates and numerous illusts. in the text, roy. 8vo., 1921 (pub. £2 5s) 15s
The Author shows that man originated in Africa, and contends that the progress and evolution of the human race can still be studied from the lowest type of original man as he advanced up the scale. These types are still extant in some parts of the world, driven away into the mountains and inaccessible forests by the Nilotic Negro, and these again into lands where they have been isolated by the Stellar Cult people into groups, with little or no inter-communication with others, and they have altered very little since the original exodus from Africa.

- 47 Schneider (Dr. Hermann) THE HISTORY OF WORLD CIVILIZATION, from Pre-historic Times to the Middle Ages, 2 vols, roy. 8vo., 1931 (pub. £2 2s) 12s 6d
When this book was published in Germany, the Preussische Jahrbuche spoke of it as "perhaps the most significant achievement since Spengler." Professor Schneider devoted twenty-five years to the preparation of this book. Speaking very generally, the principle on which he has based it is that cultures, like individuals, have their stages of infancy, adolescence, maturity and old age. By the comparative study of the cultural progress of definite peoples, we may reach conclusions which justify us in speaking of a cultural development which, with fascinating skill, Professor Schneider traces for us in the present work.

The collection of armour preserved since the middle ages in the Castle of Churburg, Tyrol, has long been a subject of keenest speculation and interest to amateurs d'armes, and other students of mediæval art.

This rich storehouse, hitherto undescribed, contains complete armour dating from the fourteenth century, which is represented only by fragments in the great national collections of the world. - 144 ——— From FETISH to GOD in ANCIENT EGYPT, roy. 8vo., 1934 (pub. 28s) 8s 6d
An endeavour to trace the development of Egyptian Religion from the fetish which was worshipped with magical ritual to the god which the theologians of Memphis worshipped about 4000 B.C.
"Of all the religious systems through which man has striven to live in communication with the supernatural world it would be difficult to find one more seemingly elaborate than that of ancient Egypt . . . The early Egyptologists, confronted with a smaller amount of material and imbued with enthusiasm to explore the then fresh field of research, confidently drew conclusions which seemed to explain satisfactorily the evidence before them. As the subject widened out, the discovery of further material added complexity to complexity . . . In these circumstances books written on general lines are today a necessity, and Sir Ernest Budge, whose lamented death occurred soon after the publication of this volume, deserved the gratitude of all classes of students in preparing it. Whether or not the reader agrees with the views he puts forward, the Author's determination to make the Egyptian religion an intelligible thing claims the gratitude and attention of every student of the subject, who should find his ideas much clarified by a study of what he has to say. The book is profusely illustrated with clear drawings of the deities described, and in the letterpress abundant use has been made of hieroglyphic type."
